Making an Appointment

It is Wednesday morning, and Ahmed is not feeling very well. He has a sore throat, a fever, and his body aches all over. His friend who is a doctor is on holiday, so he called Newlands Medical Centre to make an appointment. The receptionist at the centre wanted to know what time he could come in and if he was well enough to drive. She also wanted to know if he had been to the Medical Centre before. After Ahmed answered all the questions, the receptionist made an appointment for him at 10:30 a.m. By the end of their conversation, Ahmed was nauseated. He wanted to vomit, but he could not. Now, Ahmed needs to get dressed and drive to the Medical Centre. He is worried that he might vomit while driving to the Medical Centre. He does not want to vomit in his car. What can Ahmed do? How can he solve his problem?
