เรื่อง Stone Soup

An old man walked through the village. All the doors and windows were locked.

He told that they were poor and had nothing to eat, they were starving.

The old man said he hadn't need anything except making stone soup for all the villagers.

He built the fire and filled the water in the iron cauldron. He dropped a stone in the pot.

The villagers had come out of their homes or watched from their windows. The hunger began to overcome their fear after they had seen the stranger sniffed the broth and licked the lips.

The stranger talked to himself loudly that he thought of putting some cabbages to make the soup more delicious.

One of the villagers took him a cabbage.

He continued talking loudly about the ingredients to put in the soup in order to make the soup tastier such as salt beef, potatoes, onions, carrots, mushrooms, and so on.

When the villager heard what the stranger wanted to put in his soup, they approached hesitantly, holding all ingredients they had to put in the soup pot.

There was enough soup to share for everyone.

The elder villager offered some money to buy the stone but the old man refused. He left the village the next day and gave a silver bag which had the stone inside for the youngest boy.
